Pass Through Doors Add Functionality

If you don't want to open your bay door every time you use the passage, adding a man door or wicket door to your sectional door could be the right solution. They are convenient to use, and can be added to most overhead doors, including glass, aluminum, and steel.

The wicket door frame is constructed of sturdy steel, and can be ordered with vision panels and special lock sets. They can even be used with motorized doors, as they can have an interlock added (a special interrupt that ensures the door is closed properly before the motor can be operated).
